

Reaching Out And Within.

The Solar System is expansive.

A wonder, a kaleidoscope of undeniable chance.

The planets may be far apart,

But, interconnected, they stay together just like family.

A family force so strong called, love.

In space, we call it gravity.

Holding tight, gravity binds the planets as one heavenly unit.

During tough times families will strive to stay together forever.

Loving each other.

The moon circles to succor the planets,

Unknowingly I circle to comfort friends and pets in times of distress.

Loving simply.

Sometimes I am mad at my siblings,

Like an asteroid hitting a planet.

My tongue lashes out and I am ashamed when I say hateful things.

I am sorry.

We use satellites to see each planet.

I use facetime to see family from afar.

Rocket ships whizz high against the sky visiting planets.

Connecting man and space.

Like outer space, we may all be different,

But we can still be family.

So far away,

But always somehow,

Within Reach.
